A painter whose sweeping landscapes, made with fingers rather than brushes, are so alive that they have a pulse.

Hayal Pozanti makes abstract paintings by drawing with brightly colored oil sticks that she blends into the canvas with her fingers. From her home in rural Vermont, the artist sketches landscapes outdoors, capturing lifelike movement and natural growth. Concerned about the natural world, Pozanti calls her paintings “love letters” to the Earth. Pozanti seeks a trancelike connection between body and mind, shaping her biomorphic forms that are rooted in an original symbolic language into sweeping visions marked by the texture of touch.
