Slow Walking is a new ultra-limited edition series of video performances featuring the avatar of Marina Abramović, powered by digital art gallery TAEX.

Created to be at the age of 60, this avatar is a digital twin of this artist, a guide for the audiences to access the power of the Marina Abramović Method like never before.

The earliest version of the Slow Walking avatar debuted in 2024 at MAM Shanghai at the first edition of the "Transforming Energy" exhibition, curated by Shai Baitel. Following years of artistic and technological refinement, this avatar represents Marina Abramović's vision for the future of performance art unconstrained by physical circumstances.

Currently on show at Gallerie dell'Accademia at the 2026 Venice Biennale, Slow Walking is far more than a performance of movement at a reduced pace; it is a disciplined act of consciousness. By slowing the body to an almost ceremonial rhythm, each step becomes deliberate, weighted with attention, and stripped of habit. What is usually automatic is made visible again. Walking ceases to be a means of getting somewhere and becomes an encounter with time itself.
